SEMARANG TOURISM

Lawang Sewu is a building in Semarang, Central Java, which is the office of the Nederlands-Indische Maatschappij Spoorweg or NIS. Built in 1904 and completed in 1907. Tugu Muda is located at the first roundabout called Wilhelmina Plein. Local people call it Lawang Sewu (Thousand Door). This is because the building has a lot of doors (in fact the door that there was not until a thousand, maybe also because the window height and width of this building, people also consider it as a door)

The Sam Poo Kong Temple, also known as Gedung Batu (the Stone Building), is the oldest Chinese temple in Semarang, capital of the province of Central Java. Unlike most temples, the building does not belong to any specific religion, but rather functions as a place of worship for people of various ethnicities and religious groups including Buddhists, Taoists and Moslems. The temple is located on Jalan Simongan, West Semarang. Sam Poo Kong is the oldest of 5 temples included in the Sam Poo Kong complex which spans across 3.2 hectares. The building covers an area of 1,020 square meters and is influenced by both Chinese and Javanese 14th century architectural styles.

Semarang Old Town is the location of important point for Semarang city growth. On the site, trading activities involving international cruise lines have been developed since early 20th century. Utilization of steam and gas engines are the common thing at that time. Together with the train stations, ports, Kali Semarang, as well as Chinatown, Kampung Melayu, the site shaped the Semarang region as a whole. There are three key words to understand the Semarang Old City in the early 20th century, those are cosmopolitan, trade, and service. The site is also integrated with industrial plants and the natural resources that come from Central Java. So that it gives the impact of modern culture for all cities in Central Java. Colonial architecture appeared and crossed with local conditions, presents the unique character to the site. All of it is because there has been an obvious aim for directing the site as the center of trade and services in Semarang.

On behalf of The Ohio State University I am very pleased to send my very warm personal and professional congratulations to Prof. Dr. Fathur Rokhman, M.Hum and UNNES for being a national and international leader in Higher Education International Networking. UNNES has collaborated with OSU for many years and recently taken a leadership role in the United States - Indonesia Teacher Education Consortium (www.usintec.org), a member organization devoted to collaboration in the field of education and learning. Over many years

For many years OSU faculty have also taught at UNNES next to their Indonesian colleagues and we are currently exploring opportunities for OSU students to come to Indonesia generally and Jawa Tengah and UNNES specifically to further their learning. I am honored to take a part in a 52th anniversary of the foundation of Universitas Negeri Semarang (UNNES) and in the University President Forum. ### Naoko Tsuchimochi

Director of International Center, Seifu Institute of Information Technology Japan

Congratulations on the 52nd anniversary of Universitas Negeri Semarang.

Seifu Institute of Information Technology/ i-SEIFU Japanese Language School would like to express how much we appreciate your contribution in conducting Japanese Language Education Program which has been operated under the mutual cooperation between Universitas Negeri Semarang and i-SEIFU.

We accepted 5 students from Universitas Negeri Semarang as the first graduating group of this program in October 2015. Each of them achieved brilliant success which was beyond our expectations. One of the students passed N1 level test of Japanese Language Proficiency Test (JLPT) during this 11 months program. In the beginning, we had thought it was almost impossible to pass N1 after just 11 months study for students from the countries which do not use Kanji on a daily basis. Therefore, his amazing fruit of his efforts surprised and delighted us. Now we have 6 students of the second group and they have been doing very well so far.

Thanks to great cooperation from Universitas Negeri Semarang, this program is running smoothly and successfully. i-SEIFU would like to continue this satisfying job with wonderful staff members of Universitas Negeri Semarang.

Once again, we are pleased to express our heartfelt thanks and congratulations to Universitas Negeri Semarang. Best wishes for your anniversary celebration and for many more years of progress and success.
